Introduction

Dear Colleagues

It is with great pleasure that we invite you to participate in this very exciting conference on Kidney and Prostate cancer. Both are diverse diseases ranging from small clinically insignificant tumours to advanced incurable malignancy. Early diagnosis presents challenges balancing the need to identify potentially aggressive cancers at a curable stage and at the same time differentiating these from insignificant disease for which patients may be overtreated.

Their management is rapidly evolving with developments in our understanding of tumour biology, the emergence of conservative, surgical and non-surgical minimally invasive techniques for small tumours and the continuing evolution of new drug treatments for advanced disease. A multidisciplinary approach has become standard of care for both diseases – with many patients requiring an amalgam of therapeutic interventions.

Topics to Include

Case based discussions with expert panels and audience interaction will be used to outline treatment strategies for individual patients.

Target Audience

The talks and discussions will be targeted at a multi-disciplinary audience and at the end of the day attendees will have been brought up to date on the latest developments in these key areas.
